1871-1921

This is the fiftieth year of this nursery, making it one of the oldest on the Pacific Coast. For fifty years we have been furnishing the best quality of trees, vines, etc. This means much to present day purchasers, for no concern could endure for this length of time if its customers were not fully satisfied.

This catalogue is our only salesman, and so makes possible the low prices you will find herein. The quality of our stock is vouched for by fifty years of reputable dealings.

TERMS AND REMITTANCES

NEVER FORGET .

That if you do not plant this year you have to postpone it a whole year.

He who plants a tree benefits not himself alone, but the many who come after.

FILBERTS

This nursery was the first to introduce the fine European varieties of this nut on the Pacific coast. Felix Gillet, its founder, listed them in his first catalog issued early in the seventies. For beginners in nut planting as well as others we give below a few hints as to their care.

Filberts of the proper varieties ought to be planted everywhere that the native hazel grows and in many other locations where there is plenty of moisture. They do well under many conditions of soil and exposure. The soil requirements are not exacting but they do best on soil with a fair lime content.

Seeds or seedling trees should not be planted as they are slow in coming to bearing and the nuts are invariably smaller than the parent.

Only plants from layers of approved varieties are worth planting. They come to heavy bearing early and unlike grafted trees will always come true from the root.

They may be grown as bushes (if the center is kept open) or trained as trees. If the latter way set on a slight mound, not too deep, so that the crown will be above the level of the surrounding ground. This obviates to a large extent the suckers and facilitates their removal. Do not allow suckers to grow.

Filberts as a commercial crop present many advantages:—

- 1st. There is no glutted market for this nut especially the fine varieties.
- 2nd. Low cost of maintenance and harvest. All nuts fall to the ground and can be gathered by inexperienced labor.
- 3rd. They are practically free from pests, root rot, blight, sour sap and a host of other troubles that beset fruit trees.
- 4th. They bear early, regularly and come to maturity in a few years.

They may be planted 25x25 feet in rich ground and down to 18x18 according to soil. They bear well in hedge rows but should not be less than ten or twelve feet in the row.

The best time to plant is during December and January and may be set as late as April.

Cross-pollination. Unfortunately the Agricultural College Experiment Stations on this coast have not been able to do more work in this connection. The best information today on this point seems to call for 5 or 10% of Daviana with a like amount of DuChilly to pollinize Barcelona and each other. The addition of Red Aveline in small proportions is also advisable.

CHESTNUTS

The European and American varieties of chestnut do well wherever the soil is deep and the climate not too hot. It will do well in the foot hills and mountains of Sierra Nevada range up to 3000 feet and probably higher as it is a regular mountain tree. On the Pacific coast it is very hardy and is never injured by late spring frosts at this altitude (2600 ft.) Blooms in June and matures its nuts during October. No pests affect it on this coast and it requires no spraying and but little pruning.

Large profits are in store for the planter of chestnut trees as the market is seldom satisfied. There are 300 000 Italian on this coast and 3.000 000 in the United States. They all like chestnuts as well as they do wine.

Every home place should plant one or more of this nut tree. Besides being a grand shade tree, they yield bountifully of nuts which find a ready market at remunerative prices. We know of one dooryard tree in this county that yields the owner $30.00 to $50.00 in nuts each year.

REAL ESTATE DEPARTMENT

This department of our business specializes on high class Nevada County farm and residence property. At this time Nevada County presents unequalled opportunity in this line. Prices for developed and undeveloped fruit and nut land are ridiculously cheap. A paved state highway is now nearing completion, connecting the fruit lands and cities of Grass Valley and Nevada City with the Lincoln Highway. Another state highway crossing the county from east to west is in project. An irrigation district has been formed and surveys completed for giving the fruit growers of this county water at very low cost. An investment, now, in well selected property here will show material enhancement in value during the next few years. These few selections from our list will bear the closest investigation and we invite correspondence.

No. 85. 80 acres deep red pear and nut soil on paved highway close in to Grass Valley, a thriving city of 5000 people. This land is uncleared and carries timber to at least half its value. The mineral rights are not reserved and in this rich gold mining centre may prove of great value. This property is at 2200 ft. elevation and has proper exposure for profitable fruit culture. Price, $4000.

No. 91 170 acres deep red soil, 8 acres under cultivation and free water. Balance of land under irrigation ditch. 2½ miles from Nevada City and equal distance from Grass Valley. This land is adapted for pears, apples, nuts, and potatoes. High flavored fruit and wonderful potatoes grow on this soil at this altitude. Owner estimates $5000 worth of wood; and this only 2½ miles from two good markets. All under fence. School adjoins land. A place of this kind in an older fruit district would cost $100 an acre. Borders on two roads. Price $7500.

No. 82 Established dairy business in city limits. 12 acres under cultivation with free water. Fine modern dwelling, 8 rooms and bath, set amid well kept lawn and garden. Fruit of all kinds for home use. Price includes 7 cows, large barn, milk cellar,, separator, all within the confines of a hustling town with gas, electricity, sewer connection, an abundance of water, good schools, churches theatre and good stores.
